Christmas 1941*

BECAUSE we are strong in our conviction that the cause for which we will give our best efforts in the months ahead is right, we can at this Christmas time look forward to other Christmas seasons from which uncertainty will have been removed.

And so, with faith in and hope for the future we can enjoy such good things as are ours this Christmas. I hope that remembering them we forget the troubles of the world for a day and all have a really Merry Christmas.

W. S. Whitaker
General Manager.

Last week was a very busy one for members of the Inland Children's Chorus. Besides numerous rehearsals this group appeared in three programs. The first of these was held Wednesday night when they appeared at the Masonic Temple with the Philharmonic Orchestra in a concert. (The above picture was taken at that time.) They appeared with the same orchestra on Thursday night in a program for the Masons. Sunday they were featured at the Inland Christmas party.

★ All other pictures in this issue were taken at the Inland Christmas Party on December 21 at Memorial Hall ★

Ascending steps to visit the Inland Christmas party among others are Wilbur Alderman, of Stock, and his family; and Harry Woodall, of Stock Preparation.

Presenting tickets at the door are Clarence Schradler, of Production Control, his wife and 5-month-old daughter, Betty Lou. The young man is a friend, Richard Kurz.

A young army accompanied Ross Sergio, General Service, and wife to the party. These military clad sons carrying Santa's gifts are: Ross Jr., Paul and Mario.

Mary Louise Westbrook and her mother came to watch daddy Richard Westbrook direct the Inland Children's Chorus and to see Santa Claus.

Glad to see Santa is this little lady. Stanley Olsveski, of General Service, who accompanied her, looks on. Other Children await to talk to the jolly fellow.

Anna Marie Hoffman, 5-month-old daughter of Frank Hoffman, Clutch, was one of the youngest to attend the party. She is shown with her mother and daddy.

Santa's helper, Sarah Newsome, gives toy to youngster as patrolman Harold Ertel and party helper, Thelma Maxton, look on.

Twins attend . . . A. Vacciano holds twin sons, as twin daughters of patrolman G. Hayes look on.

New Year's baby, Judy Ann Shepherd attended . . . also shown are Harley Wombold and Leavitt Albaugh.

Entering the hall to the party are Doyle Cavin and family. High is the anticipation of the boys of seeing Santa Claus.

Having seen Santa Claus, Robert Owens, of Miscellaneous Finishing and his 9-month-old son, Gary, leave stage.

And after the festivities were over each child left the party with gifts from Santa. Here a group leaves Memorial Hall.

Ticket taker Wayne Martin welcomes Charles William Richey, little son of Charles Richey, Maintenance.

Just a little bit shy but nevertheless happy to meet Santa Claus, is this little lady, as others await their turn.

Intently watching the movies between parties are these members of the Children's Chorus.

In appreciation of their fine performances members of Children's Chorus received presents from Mr. Whittaker.

Pumpkin pies . . . Dinner for those who helped stage party was provided by the Inland Cafeteria.

Comic sheets . . . Relaxing between shows are these members of the Inland Children's Chorus.

Scenes at Christmas Party

The pictures in this issue were taken at Inland's Nineteenth Annual Christmas Party which was held at Memorial Hall on Sunday, December 21. This cross section of candid shots depicts vividly the grand time which each employe and his family enjoyed.

Broadcast Tonight

Tonight, Christmas Eve, members of the Inland Children's Chorus will sing in a program which will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup. The program will originate at the Dayton Art Institute and will go on the air at 10:15 o'clock. It will go out over the facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting Company.

Locally the program can be heard by tuning in station WHIO.

Season's Greetings

The Publication Staff of the Inlander wishes to take this opportunity to wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all fellow workers.
