The INLAND CHILDREN'S CHORUS

Directed by RICHARD WESTBROCK

The Inland Children's Chorus was organized ten years ago by Col. Wallace S. Whittaker in order to give the children of Inland Manufacturing Division employees a musical education which they otherwise might not be able to enjoy. Since its inauguration, this group of 190 youngsters between the ages of 8 and 16 has made a notable contribution to the cultural life of Dayton.

The Chorus has enjoyed the distinction of appearing eight times as guests of the Dayton Philharmonic Orchestra, as well as singing on radio programs sponsored by General Motors Corporation. In addition, annual Spring Festivals and Christmas Eve broadcasts have helped make this young group one of the Yuletide institutions of the midwest.

Here in the basement of the Loretto, untrained voices are schooled to blend as one harmonious vibrant unit.

The great night has arrived, so these two misses primp up just before they are to make their appearance.

Ties must be straight, hair slick, so Personnel executives lend a hand to see the boys are spick and span.

Nurse of Inland's Medical Department is always on hand, at concerts or rehearsals, to handle any emergency.
